

Arahmaiani (b. Bandung, 1961), is an influential figure in Indonesian contemporary art. Renowned for her pioneering role in the Southeast Asia Performance Art scene since the 1980s, she has utilized her multidisciplinary approach to critique social, religious, and cultural issues.

Arahmaiani began her formal art education at the Bandung Institute of Technology, and seeking to broaden her artistic horizons, she continued her studies in Europe, attending the Akademie voor Beeldende Kunst (Academy of Fine Arts) in Amsterdam. These international experiences exposed her to diverse artistic movements and theoretical frameworks, which significantly shaped her practice.

Her art often addresses contentious topics such as the commodification of culture, environmental degradation, and the impact of religious fundamentalism, reflecting her commitment to social justice and human rights. As Arahmaiani herself states; "Art should challenge the status quo and provoke thought. It is a means to question our realities and inspire change."

Arahmaiani's work has been widely recognized and collected by several prestigious museums and art institutions, including the Brooklyn Museum in New York; the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art in New York; the Museum of Modern and Contemporary Art in Nusantara (MACAN) in Jakarta; Asia Society in New York; and the Singapore Art Museum. Her contributions to contemporary art continue to inspire and provoke dialogue across diverse audiences and cultural contexts.
